HOGAN SELECT ADVANTAGE

The three scales of the Hogan Advantage Report are defined as follows:

DEPENDABILITY	This scale concerns being a good organizational citizen by following rules, accepting supervision, exercising self-control, finishing assignments, and avoiding unnecessary risks. Persons with high scores tend to be consistent, reliable, and self-disciplined. Persons with low scores tend to be impulsive, distractible, and possibly non-conforming.
COMPOSURE	This scale concerns the degree to which a person seems calm, even-tempered, and good humored. Persons with high scores seem to handle stress and pressure well by remaining steady, composed, and unruffled, and they tend to exert a calming influence on others. Persons with low scores tend to be tense, moody, and sensitive, and their performance may suffer when they are stressed.
CUSTOMER FOCUS	This scale concerns the degree to which a person can provide good customer service when it is appropriate; it is not about being charming or friendly—many introverts are good at customer service and many extraverts are bad. Persons with high scores on this measure tend to be calm, courteous, civil, and patient. Persons with low scores tend to seem inattentive, distracted, tense, and possibly abrupt.

The results contained in this report are NOT meant to supersede the judgment of a hiring manager. Rather, a hiring manager should use these results as one input into his/her process for arriving at a hiring decision regarding the candidate.
